St. John the Baptist, Hey November 2018
Receiving and Sharing the Love of God Everyday

Dear Friends

In the last few days, I have been looking at the All Souls Day service that has been used for years here at St John the Baptist. It made me think about how, in the course of my ministry, I have, from time to time, had the privilege of sitting with people, both Church members and non-Church members, in the last hours of their life. Being in this position can be a very emotional but very blessed experience. I have seen fear giving way to peace, pain giving way to release and rest. I have even seen a wonderful, peaceful joy in some people's faces. All this brings to mind a story which originates in Russia:

There was once a little boy of six years old whose parents died suddenly and tragically in a car accident. He was taken to live with an aunt who lived a long, long way away. It was a hard and frightening journey to reach her home. She hadn't been able to fetch the child herself, so had sent a trusted servant. To the young boy, the servant looked rather grim. The boy was terrified and tearful as they rode together into the dark night. He hardly dared speak, but eventually plucked up the courage to ask the servant, "Will my aunt be awake when we arrive?" "Oh yes" said the servant, "she will be waiting up for you. Soon you will see the light shining in her window."

Sure enough, soon they reached the clearing and saw the light shining brightly. And there was the boy's aunt, waiting for him. She lifted him up, held him in her arms and welcomed him into his new home. They had supper together by the fire and then she tucked him up in his new bed. The boy slept peacefully.

The years passed and the aunt cared for the boy lovingly, as if he were her own. When he grew up, the boy moved away to make his way in the world. One day he heard that his aunt was ill and not expected to live much longer. He rushed to her bedside and found her very weak and very, very afraid of the death that awaited her.

He took her in his arms and told the story of how, as a six year old boy, he had made that terrifying journey, afraid of all that lay ahead, and how he had watched for that light in her window. He reminded her of how warmly he had been welcomed into his new home. "You are about to make a journey just like that", he told her. "And you can trust that you too will see the lighted windows of heaven, where God will embrace you as you arrive. And that though the journey may seem long and frightening, it will bring you safely to your new and eternal home."

The boy's aunt slept peacefully, dreaming of a window where the light was always burning, while her grieving nephew kept a vigil at her bedside.

I suppose that the majority, if not all of us, fear death, but really, as Christians, we have to hang onto the promises of God, and He promises to be there for us and to take us to a place that has been readily prepared. My experience of sitting beside people and watching fear turn to peace and striving to rest has helped me to be more accepting of the promises of God, for me and for my loved ones. You may or may not be able to recall this when your own time comes, but I hope that what I have written will help you when you hear of a friend or loved one coming to the end of their life.

Meanwhile, live each day of the life that God has given you, as if it were the last.

God bless you all

30th November Saint Andrew

Andrew, whose feast day ends the Christian year on 30th November, is probably best known to us as the patron saint of Scotland, though his only connection with the country is that some of his bones were reputedly transported in the 8th century to Fife and preserved at a church in a place now named St Andrews.

In fact, there are so many legends about him all over Europe and the Middle East that it's safest to stick to what the Gospels tell us – though the strong tradition that he was martyred by crucifixion is probably true and is perpetuated in the 'St Andrew's Cross', the 'saltyre' of Scotland. The Gospels record that he was one of the first disciples of Jesus, and the very first to bring someone else to Christ – his own brother. Like many fervent Jews at the time Andrew and an unnamed companion had been drawn to the desert, to be taught by the charismatic prophet known to us as John the Baptist. Many thought that he was the long-promised Messiah, but John insisted that he was not. 'I am the voice crying in the wilderness,' he told the crowds. 'Prepare the way of the Lord! One comes after me who is greater than I am.' So when one day John pointed out Jesus to Andrew and his friend and described him as the 'Lamb of God', the two young men assumed that the next stage of their spiritual search was about to unfold. So as Jesus made off, they followed him.

All the more strange, then (though, on reflection, very true to human nature) that when Jesus turned and asked them what they were 'seeking', all they could come up with was a lame enquiry about his current place of residence: 'where are you staying?' Or, perhaps, they were hinting that what they were seeking could not be dealt with in a brief conversation. If they could come to his lodgings, perhaps their burning questions might be answered.

The reply of Jesus was the most straight-forward invitation anyone can receive: 'Come and see'. Come and see what I'm like, what I do, the sort of person I am. What an invitation!

The results of their response were in this case life-changing – for themselves, and for many other people. Andrew brought his brother, Peter, to Jesus. The next day Jesus met Philip and called him to 'follow'; Philip then brought Nathaniel. The little apostolic band that would carry the message of Jesus to the whole world was being formed. They came, they saw, they were conquered! And right at the front of the column, as it were, was Andrew, the first disciple of Jesus.
